

LEGAL PROBABILISM

MARCELLO DI BELLO – ASU

READING GUIDE – WEEK #11

Cheng/Nunn:

Sec. II Historical context of the witness-centric perspective on evidence and reliability assessment

Sec. III The rise of process-based based evidence, while the legal system still treats it as witness-based

Sec. IV Proposal for reconceptualizing the rules of evidence to better accommodate process-based evidence

Precis. No specific instructions this week. Your precis should describe (a) topic of the paper (or court opinion); (b) main thesis (or theses, if more than one); (c) supporting arguments; (d) objections to these arguments, complications or difficulties that the author considers (if any).

A precis should be no more than one page. If you want to write more, that's fine, but do not exaggerate! Be clear, simple, and concise. Due at the beginning of class.